A little assistance for the world's least-developed 31

Newspaper headlines reporting the recent special conference on the world's 31 least developed nations blared such good news as, "Western nations promise to double aid to the poorest!" Not true. Though there was some talk in Paris of more aid for the poorest, there were no firm commitments as to when it would come.

By John Madeley

— "Are we to leave one human being in the grip of despair?" French President Francois Mitterrand asked the 31 poorest nations represented at a special U.N. conference in Paris last week. The answer, judging by the stalling "Programme of Action" which emerged from the conference, was a resounding "yes". Some ways the conference (September) represented a distancing by the rich from their obligations at the fifth U.N. Conference on Trade and Development in Manila, 1979, that they double their aid to the least developed as soon as possible. Since the economic position of the least developed had hoped for a tripling of aid by 1985 and a quadrupling by 1990.

(They have been getting some $6 billion yearly, 20 per cent of the aid which the West gives to the Third World). Instead, the EEC countries pledged to give the 31 nations 0.15 per cent their GNPS "in the coming years". Japan and the United States — the latter giving only 0.02 per cent of its national income to the poorest — resisted any firm commitments, but talked of doubling aid to the least developed. No deadlines were given, making such talk meaningless as far as Third World economic planners are concerned.

Holland already gives 0.15 per cent to the poorest and Belgium and Britain are only fractionally below that target. Despite this, Britain accepted the 0.15 per cent goal only with the greatest reluctance. The West's avoidance of firm promises was described privately by one senior EEC official as "profoundly immoral". It could have devastating consequences not only for the 31, many of whom are on the verge of bankruptcy, but for the West as well. Over the past decade the balance of payments deficits of the 31 have rocketed from $3 billion in 1970 to $13 billion in 1980. Their exports now cover only half the costs of their imports. With growth almost non-existent in most of the 31 and export earnings continuing to decline, the possibility of these countries defaulting on their mounting debts is increasing. Such a default would send shock waves through the global banking system and would undoubtedly rebound to damage the economies of the northern industrial nations.

"If the situation is not halted soon, the least developed countries would have to suspend payments on loans, with all the consequences involved," said Peru's Felipe Valdivieso, chairman of the "Group of 77" developing nations. "It would be naive to expect that the decline in purchasing power of developing countries would have no effect on industrialised nations".

Mr. Valdivieso was echoing findings on the mutual economic dependence between North and South expressed in such studies as the Brandt Report, which noted that in 1977 the U.S., Japan and the EEC sent more than one-third of their exports to the Third World, and that five per cent of all U.S. jobs are in production for export to these countries. If many Third World nations were no longer able to pay for such exports, this would put tremendous strains on the economies of the industrialised world.

Yet the U.S. took a hard line at the Paris gathering, blaming the poorest for their economic plight, ignoring all considerations of colonial history, scarcity of natural resources and stubborn endemic diseases. According to U.S. spokesman Peter McPherson: "One point is clear, the economic performance of developing countries has been determined primarily by their own economic policies and budget allocations."

One bright spot at the conference was the stance of France's new socialist government. President Mitterrand acknowledged that the international community had not lived up to its commitments to the poor nations, but added that France had "resolved to make up for its delay in this area by pledging to reach by 1988 the U.N. total aid target of 0.7 per cent of gross national income". France has been giving around

Plowing by bullocks in India: The U.N. predicts that annual production in the world's 31 poorest countries will decline tremendously by 1990

0.35 per cent annually and has also promised to increase its aid to the 31 least developed nations from its present level of 0.09 per cent to 0.15 per cent by 1985. As this was one of the few firm promises from the West, France's standing among Third World countries was greatly enhanced. The conference's Programme of Action, despite lengthy chapters on trade, transfer of technology, manufacturing industry and energy, does nothing to give the poorest any extra leverage in a hostile international economic environment, where they must accept the prices offered. Nothing concrete is suggested on what is perhaps the poorest nations' most serious problem that is declining food production. If present trends continue, per capita agricultural production in the 31 countries will decline from $94 per head in 1978 to $86 in 1990, according to U.N. figures. The grim reality is that many of the 270 million people who live in these nations will starve. In Paris the rich decided, once again, to wait and watch.

Tennis Talk

Lefties in singles

By Maureen Stalla

There is no doubt about it — left handed tennis players have several advantages over right-handed players. First and foremost, every lefty has a weapon in his serve. This is because it breaks in the opposite direction of what you are used to. A right handed serve bounces to the right, but a "southpaw's" serve veers left-right into you. So not only does it bounce towards your backhand but it attacks you unexpectedly. You have grooved your return to backs which bounce right.

It seems that the hardest thing to remember when playing a lefty is that there is a forehand where his backhand should be. Most players have grooved their game to pound the backhand. In fact, shots to that side of the court are automatic. For that very reason most lefties have a well developed, powerful forehand (and a weak back hand). You must reverse your strategy and hit to the other side of the court. This is difficult and demands concentration every second because the habit is ingrained. Yet I have seen many matches where the right-handed player continually hit to his opponent's forehand and rushed the net. And he couldn't figure out why he was passed every time!

You also must change your serve. The spin serve "to the backhand" is now "to the forehand". True, your spin is no surprise to him; he has played right handers all his life. At least you should challenge his backhand!

Now a word to the lefties: First of all, work on your back hand. Run around forehands if you must. The good players will find your weakness and pound it. Be sure to hit your forehands crosscourt, and your backhands down the line. Most important, cultivate your serve. Hit it with hard side spin and rush the net. It will be an easy matter to smash the weak backhand return to the other side for an easy point.

14 countries to meet in Asian tennis tourney

BANGKOK, Thailand, Sept. 28 (A.P.) — Fourteen countries have confirmed participation in the Asian Amateur Tennis Championships to be held Oct. 14-18 in northern Chiang Mai province, member of the organising committee said today.

He said 61 men and 34 women will compete in five events — men's and women's singles, men's and women's doubles and mixed doubles.

Laffite wins Canadian Grand Prix

MONTREAL, Sept. 28 (R) — Jacques Laffite of France won the Formula One Canadian Grand Prix on a rain-soaked track in his Ligier yesterday, setting the stage for a three-way battle for the 1981 World Driving Championship in the season's final race.

Laffite took his points tally to 43, only six behind the leader, Carlos Reutemann of Argentina, who could finish no better than seventh in a Williams yesterday.

Nelson Piquet of Brazil, driving a Brabham, moved to within one point of Reutemann by finishing fifth.

Asked about his prospects at Las Vegas, Laffite said: "I'm going to try and win. I've been trying for seven years to win a world championship. I just hope the car will be competitive."

John Watson of Britain came second in a Marlboro. Local favourite Gilles Villeneuve of Canada was third in a Ferrari, followed by Bruno Giacomelli of Italy in an Alfa Romeo. Piquet and Elio de Angelis of Italy in Lotus.

Coe for life ban on athletes taking drugs

BADEN-BADEN, Germany, Sept. 28 (A.P.) — Sebastian Coe, speaking on behalf of Olympic competitors, called for a life ban on all athletes who take forbidden drugs.

He added: "We call also for a life ban on coaches and the so-called doctors who administer this evil."

Coe, 800 metres gold medalist at Moscow last year and current holder of three world records, won loud applause at the 11th Olympic Congress. He was the chairman and final spokesman for a group of 30 Olympic athletes invited to participate.

It was the first time athletes had been invited to speak at an Olympic Congress. Coe said the group hoped they would be asked again in the future.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠987 ♠A1063 ♠AK63 ♠Q85
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 3 ♠ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—No, this is not a repetition of the previous problem, even though the point count of the two responding hands is the same. This time you have four-card support for partner's first suit and the king doubleton in his second—two key features. Not to bid three spades would be a dereliction of duty, and we wouldn't blame you if you took the aggressive course of leaping to four spades!

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K6 ♠QJ8 ♠AQ105 ♠AQ88
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?
 A.—If your black-suit holdings were reversed, you might consider a takeout double. As it is, you are unprepared to handle a response in either major, so we suggest that you make the bid which describes your balanced 16-18 point hand with stoppers in the enemy suit. Bid one no trump.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠95 ♠Q87 ♠632 ♠K10742
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ 2 ♠ Pass Pass
 2 ♠ 3 ♠ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—You started out with a poor hand, and nothing has happened in the auction to improve it one whit. Pass.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠10962 ♠K4 ♠632 ♠Q884
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ 2 ♠ Pass Pass
 2 ♠ 3 ♠ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—No, this is not a repetition of the previous problem, even though the point count of the two responding hands is the same. This time you have four-card support for partner's first suit and the king doubleton in his second—two key features. Not to bid three spades would be a dereliction of duty, and we wouldn't blame you if you took the aggressive course of leaping to four spades!

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠J7 ♠QJ93 ♠Q1087 ♠KQ6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Since you are a passed hand, you can afford to jump to two no trump. Had you not passed originally, that bid would show 13-15 points. Now, however, it shows a hand that is just a bit short of an opening bid, i.e., 11-12 points and balanced. Partner should not proceed to game unless his opening bid is better than dead minimum.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠7 ♠KQ85 ♠KJ107 ♠8632
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—In support of hearts, your hand revalues to 12 points. Since you passed originally, you should advise partner of your strength by jumping to three hearts.
